

HONG KONG

Kowloon

A big city with overwhelming bright lights and bustling urban areas, Hong Kong is huge on entertainment, heritage, retail therapy, and dining. The skyscrapers of modern day Hong Kong sit cheek by jowl with old Chinese markets and sampans and junks bobbing in the harbour. Full of unexpected sights of traditional culture mixed with twenty first century commercialism, this is a city guaranteed to enthrall and never disappoint.

PLANNING YOUR HOLIDAY

WHY VISIT HONG KONG ?

It's an experience of a lifetime!

Hong Kong's two main urban areas are Hong Kong Island and Kowloon, which are separated by Victoria Harbour. Outlying areas include Lamma and Lantau Island while the historic ex-Portuguese colony of Macau is just a short ferry ride away.

Hong Kong Island is regarded as the heart of the territory with glistening skyscrapers backed by green peaks that tower over districts dedicated to ancient Chinese medicine. Traces of the colonial era are still evident with English place names and double-decker trams. Kowloon offers an intoxicating mix of the very old and the strikingly new, teeming streets with tiny street stalls and smoky temples, only minutes away from upmarket hotels and fabulous boutiques.

For sweeping views of Hong Kong's skyline take an eight minute gravity-defying funicular tram to Victoria Peak, the highest point on Hong Kong Island. Back at street level attractions include the chic shopping districts of Wanchai and Causeway Bay or the bargains of Stanley Market; the curio shops hidden amidst alleyways of the Western District or the picturesque beach of Repulse Bay and the floating restaurants of Aberdeen.

For priceless city views jump aboard the Star Ferry for a bargain historic ride across Victoria Harbour to Kowloon. Here, the district of Tsim Sha Tsui is a bazaar of shops, stalls, markets and malls while Mong Kok neighbourhood has numerous shopping streets and the popular Ladies' Market.

If time allows, exploration of the outlying islands is recommended. Lamma and Lantau are renowned for their seafood restaurants and provide a rural contrast to the hubbub that is downtown Hong Kong.
